About proofs and references:

- Proofs submitted must clearly connect one generation to the next. Write your name on the back of each proof and the generation the proof applies to. Best proofs are birth, marriage and death certificates. Also acceptable are wills, probate records, Bible records, church records, and court records.
- For some generations, when you cannot obtain all the information, include as many references as you can such as deeds, diaries, pictures of tombstone inscriptions, letters, obituaries, etc. and highlight the section that refers to your ancestor.
- When citing published sources, include copies of the title page and the pages that are pertinent to your application. For microfilms and fiches, include number and line.
- Always note the sources of information whether a library, archives, or other genealogical repository and give its location.
